

Travel Expense Policy

PolicyLens Enterprise Policies

Section 1: Purpose

This policy defines the principles for business travel planning, expense reimbursement, and financial accountability. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

This policy defines the principles for business travel planning, expense reimbursement, and financial accountability. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

This policy defines the principles for business travel planning, expense reimbursement, and financial accountability. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

This policy defines the principles for business travel planning, expense reimbursement, and financial accountability. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

This policy defines the principles for business travel planning, expense reimbursement, and financial accountability. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

This policy defines the principles for business travel planning, expense reimbursement, and financial accountability. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Section 2: Travel Authorization

All business travel must receive prior approval from the reporting manager and, where applicable, the finance department. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

All business travel must receive prior approval from the reporting manager and, where applicable, the finance department. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

All business travel must receive prior approval from the reporting manager and, where applicable, the finance department. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

All business travel must receive prior approval from the reporting manager and, where applicable, the finance department. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

All business travel must receive prior approval from the reporting manager and, where applicable, the finance department. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

All business travel must receive prior approval from the reporting manager and, where applicable, the finance department. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Section 3: Transportation

Employees should choose the most economical mode of transport that meets business requirements. Economy class is the default for air travel unless otherwise approved. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Employees should choose the most economical mode of transport that meets business requirements. Economy class is the default for air travel unless otherwise approved. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Employees should choose the most economical mode of transport that meets business requirements. Economy class is the default for air travel unless otherwise approved. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Employees should choose the most economical mode of transport that meets business requirements. Economy class is the default for air travel unless otherwise approved. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Employees should choose the most economical mode of transport that meets business requirements. Economy class is the default for air travel unless otherwise approved. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Employees should choose the most economical mode of transport that meets business requirements. Economy class is the default for air travel unless otherwise approved. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Section 4: Accommodation

Hotel bookings should be business-appropriate, reasonably priced, and aligned with company travel guidelines. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Hotel bookings should be business-appropriate, reasonably priced, and aligned with company travel guidelines. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Hotel bookings should be business-appropriate, reasonably priced, and aligned with company travel guidelines. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Hotel bookings should be business-appropriate, reasonably priced, and aligned with company travel guidelines. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Hotel bookings should be business-appropriate, reasonably priced, and aligned with company travel guidelines. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Hotel bookings should be business-appropriate, reasonably priced, and aligned with company travel guidelines. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Section 5: Meals & Daily Allowance

Meal expenses are reimbursable within approved daily limits. Alcoholic beverages and personal entertainment are generally not reimbursable. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Meal expenses are reimbursable within approved daily limits. Alcoholic beverages and personal entertainment are generally not reimbursable. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Meal expenses are reimbursable within approved daily limits. Alcoholic beverages and personal entertainment are generally not reimbursable. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Meal expenses are reimbursable within approved daily limits. Alcoholic beverages and personal entertainment are generally not reimbursable. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Meal expenses are reimbursable within approved daily limits. Alcoholic beverages and personal entertainment are generally not reimbursable. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Meal expenses are reimbursable within approved daily limits. Alcoholic beverages and personal entertainment are generally not reimbursable. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Section 6: Expense Submission

Expense claims must be submitted within 10 business days after travel with complete receipts and supporting documentation. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Expense claims must be submitted within 10 business days after travel with complete receipts and supporting documentation. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization.

Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Expense claims must be submitted within 10 business days after travel with complete receipts and supporting documentation. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Expense claims must be submitted within 10 business days after travel with complete receipts and supporting documentation. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Expense claims must be submitted within 10 business days after travel with complete receipts and supporting documentation. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Expense claims must be submitted within 10 business days after travel with complete receipts and supporting documentation. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Section 7: Reimbursement Process

Approved claims are reviewed by Finance and reimbursed through payroll or direct bank transfer according to company policy. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Approved claims are reviewed by Finance and reimbursed through payroll or direct bank transfer according to company policy. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Approved claims are reviewed by Finance and reimbursed through payroll or direct bank transfer according to company policy. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Approved claims are reviewed by Finance and reimbursed through payroll or direct bank transfer according to company policy. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Approved claims are reviewed by Finance and reimbursed through payroll or direct bank transfer according to company policy. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Approved claims are reviewed by Finance and reimbursed through payroll or direct bank transfer according to company policy. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Section 8: Non-Reimbursable Expenses

Personal shopping, traffic fines, leisure activities, room upgrades, and expenses unrelated to business purposes will not be reimbursed. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Personal shopping, traffic fines, leisure activities, room upgrades, and expenses unrelated to business purposes will not be reimbursed. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Personal shopping, traffic fines, leisure activities, room upgrades, and expenses unrelated to business purposes will not be reimbursed. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Personal shopping, traffic fines, leisure activities, room upgrades, and expenses unrelated to business purposes will not be reimbursed. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Personal shopping, traffic fines, leisure activities, room upgrades, and expenses unrelated to business purposes will not be reimbursed. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Personal shopping, traffic fines, leisure activities, room upgrades, and expenses unrelated to business purposes will not be reimbursed. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Section 9: Compliance & Audit

Expense reports may be audited to verify policy compliance. Employees must maintain accurate and truthful records. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Expense reports may be audited to verify policy compliance. Employees must maintain accurate and truthful records. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Expense reports may be audited to verify policy compliance. Employees must maintain accurate and truthful records. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Expense reports may be audited to verify policy compliance. Employees must maintain accurate and truthful records. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Expense reports may be audited to verify policy compliance. Employees must maintain accurate and truthful records. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Expense reports may be audited to verify policy compliance. Employees must maintain accurate and truthful records. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

Section 10: Policy Review

The company periodically reviews travel reimbursement limits and procedures to reflect business needs and regulatory requirements. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

The company periodically reviews travel reimbursement limits and procedures to reflect business needs and regulatory requirements. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

The company periodically reviews travel reimbursement limits and procedures to reflect business needs and regulatory requirements. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

The company periodically reviews travel reimbursement limits and procedures to reflect business needs and regulatory requirements. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

The company periodically reviews travel reimbursement limits and procedures to reflect business needs and regulatory requirements. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.

The company periodically reviews travel reimbursement limits and procedures to reflect business needs and regulatory requirements. Employees are expected to plan travel responsibly, obtain necessary approvals, retain supporting receipts, and follow financial controls established by the organization. Managers should review claims objectively, while Finance ensures compliance, timely reimbursement, and accurate record keeping. Examples, exceptions, approval workflows, and best practices are included to support consistent policy implementation.